We are pleased to see that much is now being said by the press upon the subject of disorderly conduct at theatrical performances and other public entertainments. While this censurable conduct is in most cases the outburst of youthful thoughtlessness and exuberance of spirits. and as such a generous press and forbearing public are slow to condemn it, yet this kindly disposition to overlook such unpleasant annoyances has been of late accepted as a license to go to extremes and override the rules of common decorum

He or she is taught from infancy up that this is "free America," and that as long as they have the "wherewithal" they can do or say what they please, that the public is long-suffering and forbearing, and unless you trample again and again upon its toes, it is not going to resent an insult. This may be true in a great sense, but they will learn sooner or later that the public is not as impersonal as they imagine, that it is composed of individuals, and that the individual American is not too slow to protect his rights of person, property and society,and will not submit to the wanton affronts of ignorance, rowdyssm and ill-breeding. No person, man, woman or child, has a right to act in an unbecoming manner at a private or public entertainment. Loud talking, poundwhistling, ear-piercing cat-calls and all such unseemly grievances must be done away with. The public must ring down the curtain on all such exhibitions of ill-breeding and ruffianism, and the sooner it is understood that this will be done, the We regret to say that many such dec.23,1882-3m Clarksville, Tenn. the battle of free trade and protection may appropriately be fought ought; but as long as we have to demagogues of Congress have saddled upon the country, free trade is outside of possibility and protection is a matter of inevitable necessity. Administrator's Notice.

THE Tennessee bondholders can always be trusted to blunder. In approving the proposed constitu-tional amendment to give Federal courts jurisdiction and power to compel the States, they not only further exasperate the people of the debtor State, but they fail to enlist the other States in support of an essentially bad and impracticable relief. The pending case between New York and Louisiana will determine whether the Supreme Court has not already such jurisdiction, and they should rest there. We are convinced that the tendency is not to enlarge the Federal jurisdiction A Trial Treatment Free-No judging from recent decisions upon the amendments, is fully alive to this tendency.
